We are all familiar with the fact that after high school every student has to decide whether or not he will go to university and to choose his course of study. Medical University in London was my decision. My opinion is that being a doctor is a very noble job which allows you to help people in need and it is also highly-paid. Furthermore if you are good it brings you a pretty luxurious lifestyle.

Of course, before the glory, there come six long years of studying. You have to make a lot of effort, there are loads of different subjects you have to study and you might even find some of them gross and disgusting like I did. And what shocked me most how hard it was to watch people with pretty bad injuries die.

On the other hand, there are completely amazing moments which help you to continue to work for your goal. Watching a surgery for example is an amazing experience. It is surprising how magnificent it is to watch somebody being saved. And most of the theory isn't boring and teachers give their best in explaining and making their subject interesting.

Now, in the final year of my studies, I have to think about my future career a lot. I am planning to be a successful surgeon one day, so I am going to apply for a job at a hospital where I will hopefully get more knowledge and experience and eventually the well-deserved job satisfaction.
