My Ideal School

Once upon a time there was a little princess. Her name was April. April did not like to study and learn. So one day she turned seven. She was mad at her dad because he signed her up for a school in the Fifth Avenue. April demanded that her father build her a school. April made the rules in her school. It was a fashion and art design school. Many people came to that school and signed up for a class. The school was painted in to HOT pink. The exterior was shiny and expensive. That was a ten thousand class room school. It had some libraries and some craft rooms. It had four Christian Dior stores and inspiration rooms. April was a good principal of that school. She once said "In order to be irreplaceable one must always be different" After that she became a famous fashion designer.

If I was her that would be my ideal school.
