

YALS 2012 literary competition winners

B2

Most people would say that Mathematics and History are the most important subjects because they are substantial for your future. I think I got into this discussion too many times and it seems that all the people have the same opinion.

They say Mathematics is important because it is used in everyday life and History because everyone needs to know where they came from and about their country's past. However it is more essential to know your mother tongue. Today in Serbia, there is about 15% illiterate people. I think it is unexceptable for the 21 century.

The second subject that is of value in years that are yet to come is Geography. It is, I believe, more "valuable" to know than History because you should first know the world as it is now than it was 2000 years ago.

In conclusion, it is evident that all other subjects that we study in school are also important for our general knowledge. However Geography and the Serbian Language and Literature would be the evident choice.

Lena Branković, the Big Bird