Nowadays children study a lot of subjects which are useful in life in many different ways, but some of them are not so important.

In the first place, it is very useful for children to study a lot of subjects, to learn new things, but there are a lot of subjects which aren't needed in our future.

In my opinion, two subjects which are most useful are English and Maths. I believe that English is the most useful subject because half of the world speaks in English, and wherever we go, we can find many people talking in this language. Furthermore, one has better chances of finding a job if he speaks English well enough.

Some people say that we don't need Maths in our life, and I agree that some things that we learn aren't necessary. But on the other hand, you can't live without it. Maths helps us to think logically and to solve problems in Physics, Chemistry and other important subjects.

In conclusion, I think that these two subjects are very helpful in our future lives, and it is very important to study them as hard as we can.
