

YALS 2012 literary competition winners

C1

Mobile phones – are they a revolution gone bad?

Needless to say, all the subjects studied at primary and secondary school are supposed to be useful in our further education and in our lives, basically. Of course, some of them stand out for being more important in everyday life.

Firstly, I would like to mention languages. English is certainly the most important one for several reasons. It is used as an official language in a large number of countries. Many employers demand knowledge of English language from applicants. It is also useful when using the Internet and computer on the whole. People started surfing the Internet quite often for different purposes.

The other subject I would like to emphasise is computer science. Lots of people believe that computers ruined our lives but the fact is that knowing how to use a computer is as important as being literate in the world of high technology. Nowadays, everything is done by computers in order to make our lives easier.

Personally, these two subjects play a large part in my daily life. Therefore I find them very useful, especially for doing homework and research work.

Sofija Jović, Penguin