Some people are lucky enough to choose the right studies which provide everything they had expected. I have always known what my interests and goals are, so I did not have any second thoughts about my choice. Because of that I chose to study Farming Organic Food.

At first, it was not so easy for me because of my parents. They tried to convince me that was a shame to waste my time on something very unpopular and non-profitable at that time. And, of course, we are all familiar with the situation nowadays when knowledge about healthy food is highly useful and prestigious.

On the other hand, there was the prejudice about working in fields which made studies look less serious and demanding. My mentors would just smile at this because we know how much of a hard working and open-minded person you have to be to produce, create and live (surrounded with the unexpected). In that way you create better life, not only for yourself but for all the mankind. And for that you can use your mind, hands, soul and heart.

This course has been providing me with a completely different way of studying and therefore my future plans have a good basic in my current education. A well-organised, modern farm, my own piece of land, freedom and knowledge can do anything that I imagine. Being ready for the future is the main goal of this course and I cannot wait to create my own, supported by wonderful things I have learnt.
