

ONLINE SHOPPING

In a modern world, where everything is digitalised, people do not have to leave the house. There are restaurants that deliver, companies sending fresh ingredients if you feel like making a meal yourself. Channels offer the latest content for entertainment and skype is a modern way of face to face communication available to all with an internet connection.

In the past year we have witnessed more and more people opting for doing things online versus going out and doing it as they used to. A great example is online shopping. Should you shop online or go for a walk and look into shop windows? Purchasing via Internet may prove better as it saves precious time that would be spent looking for a parking space and crowds are not a problem from your sofa. Quicker, easier and for a lot of people online shopping is also better.

No matter the sex, purchasing a long wanted item has always been a joy. Provided you need to rewind and have some money to burn, what better way than shopping? Trying on items is a classic activity that is always popular. You have fun, socialise and workout (carrying bags really builds muscle), something you cannot do while at home.

In conclusion, many people prefer doing things online. It may be cheaper and easier but I believe that the main cause is the time consuming aspect of it all. We are a fast moving world and every second counts in the neverending rat race we call life. Maybe one day everything will slow down again and I will not be the only one at the mall.
