

B2 My Future Studies

When I was younger, I wanted to become an astronaut because the first celebrity my father showed me was Yuri Gagarin. He was the first man that flew to space. I always used to pretend that I was in a zero-gravity state.

As I got older, I realized that you need a lot of mental and physical practice and also considerable knowledge of physics and mathematics for that job. At one point I thought of becoming an architect, which is an interesting and well-paid job, and I also like making architectural drawings. Another dream of mine is to become a pilot. You get to travel the world, but on the other hand, you spend a very small amount of time at home with your family.

My mind is still seeking an answer to the question, what can I be when I grow up? I still have two years to pick the perfect path for me, but I am also afraid of what will happen if I don't. Will I follow my childhood dream?
